Application for Front-End Developer position

Dear Hiring Team,

I am looking for an opportunity to take the next step in my front-end development journey and put my skills into practice in a professional environment. Through my studies at Noroff, I have been learning how to turn designs and ideas into functional websites using HTML, CSS, and JavaScript.

What I find most interesting about front-end development is the combination of visual design and problem-solving. A website needs to look good, but it also needs to work well on different devices and make sense to the people using it. This is something I have tried to keep in mind throughout my coursework.

My projects have given me the opportunity to explore different aspects of web development. With Rainy Days, I worked on the structure and styling of an online outdoor store. In Square Eyes, I took things further by using JavaScript to retrieve movie data from an API and implement features such as searching, filtering, sorting, and shopping cart functionality. These projects have helped me understand how different parts of a website work together to create a complete user experience.

I have also learned the importance of reviewing and improving my work after the initial implementation. Whether I am adjusting a layout for smaller screens, refining the styling, or correcting issues in the code, I see each revision as an opportunity to build better habits and develop my skills.

As someone at the beginning of a career in front-end development, I know there is still a great deal to learn. I would value the chance to work alongside more experienced developers, contribute to practical projects, and gain a better understanding of how development works in a professional team. I bring a genuine interest in the field, a willingness to tackle challenges, and a commitment to improving through experience and feedback.

Thank you for taking the time to review my application. I invite you to explore my CV and portfolio to see some of the work I have completed so far. I would appreciate the opportunity to discuss how I could contribute to your team.

Best regards,

Sindre Kristiansen
